

LEE CO. OFFICIALS IN SUCCESSFUL MAN HUNT TODAY

GOV. SMALL IS DENIED REHEARING

SUPREME COURT RE-AFFIRMS ITS FORMER OPINION

Justices Heard and Duncan Again File Minority Opinion

Impeachment Talk Premature, Ex-U. S. Attorney Declares

Chicago, Feb. 9.—(AP)—Talk of impeachment of Gov. Small by his opponents, Edwin W. Sims, former U. S. district attorney and of counsel for the governor, said was considerably premature.

"There can be no ground for impeachment during the pendency of the suit," said Mr. Sims, "for if that were so, all any one would need to do would be to have some irresponsible persons start a suit and then follow it up with impeachment proceedings."

"This is simply a suit for an accounting to determine what, if anything, Len Small owes the state of Illinois on state money loaned out while he was state treasurer. He was not governor then, but treasurer. What, if anything, he owes the state, is not yet known. The supreme court has not said that the governor owed $1,000,000, it has merely affirmed the finding of the court below and now the whole matter goes back to the circuit court of Sangamon county for a finding, first by a master-in-chancery and then by the circuit court and possibly then by the state supreme court again, if there is any error.

The proceedings yet to be taken may require a year and a half or two years, Mr. Sims said, and unless and until the circuit court of Sangamon County finds that the governor owes the state money and in what amount there could be no foundation even for talk of impeachment.

Little or no consideration of any appeal to the United States Supreme Court has been given in this suit, Mr. Sims said.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 9.—(AP)—Re-affirming its previous decision, the Supreme Court of Illinois today denied a rehearing and directed Governor Len Small to account for $1,000,000 interest money alleged withheld by him while state treasurer in 1917 and 1918. It was a divided decision, Justices Heard and Duncan repeating with added emphasis, their original dissent.

By its majority decision reaffirmed today the Supreme Court held Governor Small, the late Senator E. C. Curtis and V. C. Curtis, withdrew more than $30,000,000 from the state treasury for investments and reinvestments in packers' notes, and that the resulting interest money was paid into the treasury.

On December 15 when the supreme court handed down the original five to two opinion upholding the Sangamon County circuit court, Governor Small addressed "the people of Illinois" with a statement that "a great mistake has been made." Shortly afterward his petition for a rehearing was filed.

Denied Presumption

In it he quoted the legal phrase that "a man is presumed innocent until proven guilty," and declared that this presumption was denied him, that he had been ordered to account without a fair trial in the civil suit after he had been found "not guilty" in a criminal trial based on the same grounds.

In the majority opinion, which is sustained by the court in its denial of a rehearing, it is held that the Grant Park Bank was not in fact a bank; that Grant Park Bank was a mere name used by Governor Small and the Curtis' to conceal the loans made from the state treasury to the packers; that these private dealings in state funds were concealed by not including the amounts used as "safe account," thus giving the impression that that much cash was in the safe or vault, and that there was nothing in the treasury to show that it was loaned to any one.

The total amount collected from the packers, discount or interest on the loans from the treasury, was about $1,000,000 according to the majority opinion, and the total collected from the banks with definite interest contracts, and from State Auditor Russell's bank at Jacksonville which had a $3,000,000 deposit on an interest contract (which the court held Governor

COOLIDGE TELLS SENATE THERE'S NO REASON FOR INTERVENTION IN STRIKE

CATHOLIC CHURCH IS AGAINST COMPULSORY DRYNESS

—CARDINAL O'CONNELL

Says Prohibition Isn't in Conformity With Holy Scriptures

New York, Feb. 9.—(AP)—A new note on prohibition which has been agitating the Episcopal church has been struck in a pronouncement by Cardinal O'Connell of Boston, that the Roman Catholic Church applauds voluntary abstinence but opposes compulsory prohibition.

Although the Catholic church has long been fighting against intemperance, the Cardinal said, compulsory prohibition is a different matter.

"For compulsory prohibition," he said, "in general is flatly opposed to Holy Scripture and to Catholic tradition."

Although it has been made clear a thousand times that we will work with our separated brethren as temperance men, but not as tools of those whose confessed policy is worldwide prohibition by installments, disloyal attempts are still being made to entangle us.

When Cardinal Hayes arrived here last Saturday after a visit to the Vatican, he defined the Catholic church's stand as always for voluntary temperance and against extremes like prohibition.

To Continue Fight

Dr. James Empingham, national secretary of the Church Temperance Society, said yesterday that his organization would continue its movement to modify the Volstead act. Only 19 out of 141 bishops thus far have publicly opposed the society's stand he said.

He declined to reveal the figures on which he based his announcement that a majority of the 20,000 members of the society favored modification, but maintained that his original statement stood.

Dr. Empingham said that Bishop Manning of New York three weeks ago told him that he did not believe in prohibition, but did believe in enforcement of the law. The Bishop said this statement was in error and that his strong prohibition sermon Sunday represented his attitude.

Support of the society's stand came yesterday from Bishop White of Springfield, Ill., who characterized the present law as "largely a joke," which he believed cannot "really be enforced without a standing army." Bishop White asserted his favored modification of the Volstead act "on absolutely conscientious grounds."

Frederic Batchelder and son Verne and wife and two children, Miss Ida Robinson and Mrs. Culver of Peru, Ill., spent the week end at the home of Mrs. Jennie Finkler and family. Mr. Batchelder is Mrs. Finkler's nephew.

Resolution Asking Action Brings Quick Reply

Washington, Feb. 9.—(AP)—The senate appealed to President Coolidge today to seek a solution of the anthracite controversy, but the request was answered almost immediately by a reiteration at the White House of the President's policy of non-intervention.

After having twice refused to consider such a step, the senate succumbed to the growing pressure for action and adopted a resolution by Senator Copeland, democrat, New York, asking the chief executive to call operators and miners into conference at the White House.

As adopted however, the resolution was worded so as to leave it to the President to decide when the conference would be held.

The Senate's action it was said officially, had not convinced Mr. Coolidge that there was any change in conditions which would justify a change in his policy.

The President was described as most anxious to see a termination of the anthracite suspension, but unable to see any method by which the federal government, if injected into the situation, could lend effective assistance toward a solution.

ROCK ISLANDER "PUT ONE OVER" ON BIG LEAGUE

Evolved Great Scheme to Get ex-Kaiser to Come Across

(Early Story on Page 7)

Rock Island, Ill., Feb. 9.—(AP)—It remained for H. A. McKee, Rock Island chiropractic student, little versed in diplomacy but equipped with the Scotch insight into the realms of finance, to attempt, and accomplish, a "real coup" in dealing with Sir Eric Drummond, secretary of the League of Nations.

After being confronted with the Associated Press message from Geneva this morning, and the additional fact that he had received an official communication from the League of Nations yesterday, McKee sidestepped questions put to him by a reporter for nearly an hour, before he weakened and admitted that "there really isn't any old woman in Rock Island that is anxious to learn the former Kaiser's address," and that his letter to the League was merely a scheme, concocted in his own brain, to get the former German emperor to hold him finance a book he has written on "Diet" and to have him use his influence to help him get the American rights for selling "The Dutchman," a German multiplying machine. McKee said he thought he was more likely to get the information he desired by telling the story about the old German woman "who made good coffee."

Tea and Silk Stockings Ruin People Says Doctor

Belfast, Feb. 9.—(AP)—Tea drinking is ruining people, and silk stockings are to blame for some present day illnesses, Dr. Dennis O'Hagen, surgeon of Louth County Infirmary told a committee called to discuss treatment of tuberculosis.

"What is required," he said, "is a health campaign to get people to feed themselves properly. I advise people to drink less tea and get back to the days of 'strabout' and 'butter milk.' There would be less tuberculosis if people took this advice." Strabout is a porridge of oatmeal or corn meal boiled in water and stirred.

ITALIAN ATTACK ON GERMANY CAME "INOPPORTUNELY"

Much Interest Centers in Stressemann Reply in Chamber

Geneva, Switzerland, Feb. 9.—(AP)—Interest in League of Nations circles was focused upon Germany today.

In the midst of the Italo-German polemics over the Italianization of the South Tyrol, formerly Austrian territory, to the alleged detriment of the German-speaking section of the population, the Berlin government gave notice that tomorrow it would make formal application for League membership.

The assembly session probably will be set for March 10, thus permitting Germany to be represented at the latter part of the March session of the council.

Germany May Appeal

In view of the Italo-German situation, it is thought that Germany will take advantage of her position as a member of the council to make a special drive concerning treatment of minority populations as in the South Tyrol.

League circles believe the Berlin government will also make a second drive in the direction of restoration of the anthracite suspension, but unable to see any method by which the federal government, if injected into the situation, could lend effective assistance toward a solution.

BULLETIN

Berlin, Feb. 9.—(AP)—The German government today declined to reply to Premier Mussolini in a tone which is better suited to mass meetings than to diplomatic conversation with other nations.

Foreign Minister Stressemann made this declaration in the Reichstag today in opening his reply to Saturday's broadcast from the Italian premier regarding the situation in southern Tyrol.

"We have no quarrel with the Italian people, who, according to Mussolini's own words, written in 1920, have no interests incompatible with the Germans," Dr. Stressemann continued.

"German-Italian difficulties, as Mussolini then stated, always were due to misunderstanding and distrust, conditions of mind, rather than conflicting economic or political interests."

London, Feb. 9.—(AP)—There has been no lessening in the belief by some portions of the public and among some of the newspapers that the attack on Germany by Premier Mussolini of Italy came at an unfortunate time.

It is considered by the newspapers to be particularly unfortunate because of Germany's announced intention to seek membership in the League of Nations, and it apparently has not abated even though Germany yesterday decided to make formal application to become a member and the application doubtless now is on its way to Geneva.

There is much interest here over what will be the reply of Foreign Minister Stressemann in the Reichstag. Although the members of the cabinet and of the Reichstag are angry over the outburst, the belief prevails that Dr. Stressemann will deliver only a temperate response.

Advices from Vienna indicate much agitation, particularly in Tyrol, over the situation. A demand has been made by a mass meeting at Innsbruck that the provincial diet be called into session to take such steps at Geneva and Rome as will be calculated to banish the fears of an invasion by Italians. It is in southern Tyrol where all the trouble lies. In that part of the region awarded to Italy under the St. Germain treaty, the alleged ill treatment of the minority German population and the consequent charges and counter charges led Premier Mussolini to make his dramatic attack on Germany for alleged propagation of the anti-Italian feeling.

Allegations in both Germany and Austria had been to the effect that Germans in southern Tyrol have been oppressed by the Italians, even to being forced to use the Italian language in their schools. There was much resentment around Christmas time when it was reported Italian officials in southern Tyrol declined to permit use of Christmas trees, declaring this a German, not an Italian custom. The Italian commissioner rescinded the order and the Germans were permitted to use their trees.

Both in Berlin and Vienna boycott of Italy has been advocated in reprisal for the alleged wrongs committed against German Tyrolians.

BODY OF STATE HOSPITAL PATIENT TAKEN FROM THE RIVER MONDAY AFTERNOON

Verdict of Suicide Returned by Jury This Morning

The body of Henry Heuser, 18 year old feeble minded epileptic patient from the Dixon state hospital, who suicided Sunday evening by drowning in Rock river, was recovered shortly after 3 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Employees at the institution, who had worked throughout the day breaking ice gorges and cutting through fields of ice, found the body about a hundred yards from where he ran out on the ice and dived into the icy water about 4:30 Sunday afternoon.

The remains were taken to the Staples Moyer mortuary where coroner Frank M. Banker conducted an inquest this morning at 9:30, the jury returning a verdict of death due to drowning with suicidal intent. Witnesses testified that Heuser was committed to the institution Feb. 15, 1924 and that he had been troublesome and inclined toward fighting. Sunday afternoon he called Raymond Wiloughby, a patient in the epileptic ward, names and the altercation followed. Wiloughby told the jury that he slapped Heuser a couple of times with his open hand and that Heuser kicked him. Other patients stopped the fight and Heuser told some of these that he was going to kill him.

Threatened to Suicide.

To Steen Visnovski, his companion patient, according to the testimony of Visnovski, Heuser said he was going over and lie down on the railroad tracks and let a train run over him, or go to the river and drown himself. Visnovski talked to him, trying to change his mind when Heuser dashed towards the river. Visnovski ran to the ward and notified the attendant, Charles Greer, who immediately dispatched other patients to bring Heuser back and notified the supervisor, George Hain.

Visnovski ran to the river and testified that he saw Heuser run out on the ice and dive into the water at an open space. He was swimming and struggling in the water, Visnovski said, when he called to him to come out. Heuser seemed to regret his hasty action and tried to get out of the water but sank, his companion told the jury.

The body will be prepared for burial and sent to relatives at Mascoutah, St. Clair county, for burial.

Mother of Dixon Man Buried Today From Sterling Home

Mrs. Louisa J. Logan, mother of Mack Logan of this city, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Harry Conrad of Sterling, at 2:50 o'clock Sunday afternoon, after a serious illness of three weeks. Funeral services were conducted at the Conrad home this afternoon, Rev. J. C. Moore, pastor of the Sterling Christian church officiating, and with burial at Riverside cemetery there.

Louisa Jane McClurg was born July 21, 1855, at Garden, Athens county, Ohio, and was 70 years, six months and seven days of age at the time of her death. She was the youngest of six children. She was married to George F. Logan on Feb. 9, 1878, 43 years ago today, at her home town in Ohio, where she spent most of her life.

Nine children were born to this union, the youngest dying in infancy. Four sons and four daughters survive, as follows: George and Ernest Logan, of Rock Falls; Mack Logan, of Dixon; Bunner Logan, of DeKalb; Mrs. A. Redfern and Mrs. L. A. Rippberger, of Oregon; Mrs. Matt Lindstrom, of Rockford, and Mrs. Harry E. Conrad of Sterling.

The Young People's Choir of St. Paul's will lead the hymn in the devotional period of this evening's program, and also render a special anthem.

SAYS PROBE OF AIR SERVICE IS AIMED AT CHIEF

Mitchell Declares General Patrick is Victim of Espionage

Washington, Feb. 9.—(AP)—Secretary Davis' investigation of activities or air service officers is aimed primarily at Major General Patrick, head of the army air force, in the belief of William Mitchell, and the former colonel has rallied to the defense of his one-time chief.

Describing General Patrick as "the only member of the old regime to see the light and come out and tell the truth about it," Mitchell said the general is being made the victim of an espionage system within the department. The new investigation of the air service officers, Mitchell contended is "aimed at any change in existing conditions" and was undertaken at the insistence "of the war department clique."

A circular said to have been issued to obtain congressional backing for the bill proposing establishment of an air corps, and now subject of a department inquiry, was given to Secretary Davis, Mitchell declared, by a clerk "presumably acting as a spy."

The former officer said the circular presented a summary of a memorandum prepared by General Patrick for the use of congress, and that it was distributed by a reserve officer.

Mitchell characterized the "espionage system" as a continuation of one involved during the war and that any man is disloyal who "does not agree with what the clique in the war department wants him to say."

STOCKS IN FOOD CONCERNS FALL; RESULTS SUITS

Federal Probe of Mergers Causes Drop in Trading

New York, Feb. 9.—(AP)—One food corporation merger has fallen through and Wall Street has had an uneasy market in food stocks as an aftermath of a federal anti-trust suit filed yesterday in Baltimore against the proposed $2,000,000,000 Ward Food Products Corporation.

Ward Baking B stock, considered by Wall Street the chief speculative stock of the enterprise, tumbled from 79.8 to a low of 66.12. There was a rally to 69.14 before the close.

Negotiations for a $140,000,000 consolidation of the Postum Cereal and California companies were halted after $185 a share had been offered for a controlling interest. It was considered certain Saturday that the merger would go through, but it was announced yesterday that the negotiators were not willing to buy or sell into a government investigation.

California stock broke 22 1/2 points to 152.12 and Postum 6 1/2 points after the announcement.

The Federal Trade Commission's New York hearing on the proposed merger was abruptly adjourned during the testimony of G. B. Barber, chairman of the Continental Baking Corporation. Mr. Barber objected to making public 1925 sales figures of the corporation which is one of those in the proposed merger in the Ward Food Products Corporation. He expressed willingness to give the figures privately today to the commission.

ONE FLEEING BANDIT KILLED; ONE WOUNDED; OTHERS TAKEN AFTER FIGHT AT CHADWICK

Risley and Deputies Rushed to Head Off the Fugitives From Clinton, Iowa, Force This Morning

Sheriff E. C. Risley and Deputies Will Rose and E. L. Fulmer today took part in a great man hunt through the northwestern part of the state, in which every sheriff's officer of the section participated and which resulted in the killing of one, the wounding of another and the capture of the remaining three after a gun fight at Chadwick. The story of the big hunt is told in the following Associated Press messages.

First advice of the man hunt was given the Lee county officials by The Telegraph, and immediately Sheriff Risley and his aides, armed heavily, left in their speedy Buick by way of Polo to head off the fleeing desperadoes. That their "hunch" was right was proven by the fact that they had reached Lanark by the time the bandits were caught, and were surely in front of them. The story of the successful man hunt is told in the AP's inimitable way as follows:

BULLETIN (By Telegraph Staff Man)

Chadwick, Ill., Feb. 9.—Harry Marks, 11 North Albany Street, Chicago, was killed, and Henry William, 3041 Monroe St., Chicago, was wounded, in a battle between a bandit gang, escaping from Clinton, Ia., and a posse of Chadwick "Town Guards" here today when the Chadwick guard and Sheriff Arthur Hamilton and his force of deputies of Whiteside county closed in on them from opposite ways on the highway.

The license on the bandits' car, a Buick sedan, 1-922-066, was issued to Paul DeVere, Campbell Hotel, Moline, Ill., and was issued for an Essex.

Chadwick, Ill., Feb. 9.—(AP)—One bandit is dead, one is thought dying, and three others are in the custody of officers as the outcome of a gun fight near here today when the Chadwick, including Alfred Fairfield and Frank Sawyer attempted to shoot their way through a posse of Chadwick officers. Fairfield and Sawyer were fleeing after their escape from two Clinton county deputy sheriffs this morning.

Responding to telephone calls, officers in all surrounding counties organized posses and had the bandits hemmed in in less than two hours after the escape.

In the posse were Ray Hartman, M. L. Spearman, John Kirch, Harry Schriener, Chadwick banker; C. L. Kirgery, also a banker; and W. J. Schriener.

All were members of the town guard. W. J. Schriener is a former Dixon man and is a son-in-law of Mrs. Carrie Brink of N. Dixon.

Met Car On Highway.

Upon receiving the warning of the approach of the bandits the posse, heavily armed, started westward to intercept the oncoming machine.

The dead man was not identified in first reports of the bandits' encounter with the officers reaching here. Nor had the name of the other wounded man been established. The latter was left at Chadwick while the prisoners were being brought back to Clinton this afternoon.

Spectacular Flight.

The gun fight terminated a spectacular flight across the Mississippi into Illinois after three confederates of Fairfield and Sawyer covered deputy sheriffs with shotguns and permitted the two payroll robbers to escape, then followed in another automobile.

Fairfield and Sawyer had just been sentenced to serve terms of from one to twenty-five years in the state prison for a $2,000 payroll robbery here, and were being returned to jail when the deputies were confronted by the three confederates of the pair.

The prisoners, as if by careful prearrangement, walked calmly to an automobile at the curb and drove away, the rescue attracting but little attention.

Then, as their rescuers released the deputies and ran for their own automobile, the officers fired upon them, and one is believed to have been wounded.

They Got Good Start.

They obtained a good lead upon the pursuing officers however, and were well into Illinois before the chase was organized.

About two and a half miles west of Chadwick the fleeing bandit car was seen approaching from the west. The posse blocked the road and one member of the bandit gang jumped out of the machine and opened fire. Ray Hartman returned the fire and the bandit dropped dead. The others in the machine jumped out and also started shooting and were greeted with a return salvo and another fell, mortally wounded.

Fugitives Unhurt.

The other three bandits saw that further fight was useless and surrendered. Fairfield and Sawyer were unhurt.

In the midst of the shooting a car loaded with another pursuing party, Sheriff Hamilton and deputies from Morrison, arrived and hastened the surrender.

Sheriff Cooke of Clinton took charge of the prisoners and returned them to Clinton.

The Carroll County coroner took over the body of the dead man. Medical aid was given the wounded bandit but his death was expected momentarily, the sheriff reported.

STORY OF ESCAPE

Clinton, Iowa, Feb. 9.—(AP)—Confederates of two payroll robbers covered Deputy Sheriffs with shotguns as they were leading their prisoners to jail here this morning while the prisoners, Alfred Fairfield and John Redman, alias Frank Sawyer, leisurely walked to an enclosed automobile and drove away.

The deputies fired on the rescuers as they ran toward their own car and one of the men is believed to have been wounded. All officers attached to the sheriff's office and the police department took up the chase.

The car, carrying Fairfield and Redman who were involved in a $2,000 payroll robbery here and were returned for trial after their arrest in Rock Island, Ill., crossed the Mississippi bridge into Illinois.

Had Been Sentenced

The men had been sentenced to serve from 1 to 25 years in state prison shortly before their escape.

The bandits' auto is reported to have gone to Thompson, Ill., where impassable roads presumably caused a change in plans and the auto returned to Fulton, Illinois and then turned east toward Morrison.

Fairfield and Sawyer were members of a band of four that held up Homer Shaddock, Oct. 15, 1925 and took $2,562.25 of Northwestern Railway payroll money. The two were apprehended in Rock Island the next day and after a strenuous legal battle, were extradited and brought to Clinton for trial which resulted in their conviction last week.

Has Anybody Seen Our Cat?

Again the force in The Telegraph office is in serious trouble. And another appeal to the public is essential.

For "our cat"—as a matter of fact he's not ours at all, and was merely left here for SAFE KEEPING—has gone missing.

Our cat—a beautiful tiger, of most affectionate disposition, not so big, and a real fellow—has gone missing; and since he belongs to a sweet little girl who trusts us to take good care of her pet, we must get him back.

So PLEASE, dear reader, if you see a strange cat, that likes company and seems to be homeless, call us.

Lodge News

Scouts Had Happy Evening at Dixon K. C. Monday Eve.

The members of the K. of C. Club entertained the Boy Scouts of Dixon with a birthday party Monday evening at the Moose hall, the occasion being the sixteenth anniversary of Scouting in America, which was observed by the Scouts and Scout officials and friends all over the country. A Scout radio program broadcast by twelve stations at the expense of St. Joseph, Detroit, was the opening feature of the program. Camp songs were sung and at 8:15 o'clock the boys recommenced their Scout Oath and Laws. This is an annual event and wherever Scouts are assembled on February 8th at this hour they pledge again their promise of better citizenship.

The boys then gave a demonstration of knot tying, fire by friction, signaling and some of the many uses of their Scout neckerchief.

Lawrence Daily was chairman of the committee in charge and introduced Scout Executive J. C. Brown, Dr. L. R. Evans, President of the Scout Council; Robert Hallenberg, Scout Commissioner; Father Story, Scoutmaster of Troop No. 1; and Gerald Jones, Scoutmaster of Troop No. 2, who gave short talks to the members of the club and the boys, after which refreshments were served.

ODD FELLOWS MEET
A regular meeting of Dixon lodge, No. 39, I. O. O. F., will be held this evening at 7:30. Business of considerable importance is to be transacted at this time and a full attendance of the membership is desired.

"Travelers from East" Bazaar in Fine Start
The "Travelers from East" opened their annual bazaar at Rosbrook hall Saturday evening and as usual at their affairs, the floor was crowded with dancers. The hall is very prettily decorated and the floor is in excellent shape. The music was exceptionally good and the dancers all enjoyed it, most of them remaining until the very last dance was over. The bazaar will continue all of this week.

SEAT SALE FOR LET'S GO PEGGY THURSDAY NIGHT

Holders of "Service Tickets" to Get First Chances

Thursday evening at 7:30 the seat sale for "Let's Go Peggy" will open at the Dixon theater. Those holding service tickets may get in line when the choice seats for both nights will be placed on sale. Only those holding service tickets can be accommodated. The seats are limited to the tickets now out. Such seats as are left will be placed on sale in the regular manner Friday morning.

The committee having in charge the seat sale today stated that indications point to the record advance sale of seats for any attraction in the history of the beautiful new Dixon theater. It does not appear to be interest manifested in organizations as is usually the case, though the fact the show is under Kiwanis auspices will go far towards filling a large portion of the house for the two nights, but the reputation gained by the production of "The Little Lady" has convinced the amusement lovers they are to see an unusual show in "Let's Go Peggy" and they are not passing up the rare opportunity of seeing the big dancing fun show.

Rehearsals are progressing day and night. The local stars are taking on professional form. Those who have been in touch with the show and who have been identified with all past shows in this city say the show is a riot of laughter. The costumes and scenery arrived yesterday and will be installed in the Dixon theater today. Many theater parties have been arranged for both nights. All papers published within 30 miles of Dixon are carrying large advertisement flashes and many nice things are being said in the columns of the weeklies about the wonders of the show. Manager Rorer is taking charge for the local committee and is leaving nothing undone to make this the record attendance of the season.

FORMER DIXONITE HEAD OF SEATTLE REALTORS' BOARD

C. M. Cryor is Elected President of Import-ant Organization

The Spokane, (Wash.) Spokesman-Review of recent date contained the following concerning C. M. Cryor, formerly of Dixon, a son of the late Dr. S. C. Cryor, former pastor of the Dixon Presbyterian church, and Mrs. Cryor:

A "nest egg" for the construction of a building for the social and business activities of the Spokane Realty board was presented to the incoming president, C. M. Cryor, at the annual dinner at the Davenport last night by the retiring president, Paul A. Schedler. Mr. Schedler expressed the hope that under Mr. Cryor's wing it would turn out to be an "ostrich egg and hatch" into a great big ostrich.

Start Building With $3500 Pledge.
The "nest egg" was in the form of a document signed by realtors and their families, pledging $3500 for a building. This money is to yield 4 per cent to the subscribers until such time as enough funds have been secured to warrant a bond issue; and when that time comes, the subscribers will receive mortgage bonds in proportion to their subscriptions. The money is to be paid in within 60 days.

President Cryor was taken by surprise and immediately asked for a pen to all his name to the list.

President Cryor urged the importance of vision and spirit of service. He declared Spokane is far behind in its building program.

He pointed to the need for "another office building bigger and better than any here." While 600 homes were built in 1925, more than that will be needed in 1926, he said.

Plan for City of 250,000.
"The zoning system should be instituted," he insisted, "for the city will get away from us. We must have vision and plan for a city of 250,000."

Another job for the realtors, he said, is to bring the county commissioners and the public together on deals for the many desirable lots the county holds for taxes.

SUPREME COURT RE-AFFIRMS ITS FORMER OPINION

Small did not explain) was about $450,000.

He Paid in $450,000

Substantially the latter amount has been paid over by Small, but leaving none of the million dollars collected from the packers accounted for, according to the findings of the majority of the court, which says specifically that "tabulation shows through the device called the 'Grant Park Bank', the Curtises, with the cooperation of Small, withdrew from the state treasury and invested in packers' notes, $1,448,500, and that the investments and re-investments amounted to more than $30,000,000 during Small's term."

The court further held that Small went with Curtis and waited nearby while Curtis made loans directly to the packers. The majority opinion says in this connection: "Each draft was drawn on the Fort Dearborn payable to 'Grant Park Bank' and sent to Grant Park by mail. E. C. Curtis received the draft as sent, and the same day he and Small would go to Chicago and Curtis would buy a packer's note or notes with the money and deliver the same to Small."

Further the court holds that $535,000 drawn from the treasury was used to buy securities other than packers' notes and that most of these securities have been traced to Small, according to the court, which says in substance from the treasury thus converted to Small's personal use, was replaced by discounts from the packers' notes.

Further the majority opinion holds that the law requires all payments of interest to be paid directly to the treasury, and that it is unlawful for the treasurer as an individual to receive them; that Small diverted interest and held it twenty-one months and then reported $306,424.33; that sixteen months after Small left the treasurer's office he paid over $143,585. The court holds in substance that Small not only kept the interest on the packers' notes, but that he held interest money that he did final account for a period of over one year before turning it in.

Summarized, it is the finding of the court majority that on Small's own testimony he owes the state, under the law, about a million dollars of interest money collected through the Grant Park Bank, and in addition to this is liable for interest on the amount at five percent per annum since he should have accounted in 1919, which will add to the million about $350,000.

The prosecution has set up in the records that the constitution provides (section one Art. 6) that all books and papers of the state treasurer shall be kept at Springfield. It is contended that Small kept all interest accounts regarding $30,000,000 loaned to packers and $3,000,000 loaned to Russell's bank in his private safe at Kankakee.

The only question left for the master on accounting is to determine the exact amount collected by Small from the banks and from the packers, and the exact amount paid into the treasury. The court holds him liable for the difference.

It would be possible for the account to be stated and reported to the circuit court within sixty days and a final decree entered by May 1 of this year.

Governor Small's continued incumbrance as chief executive of Illinois and his right to an appeal to the United States supreme court were foremost questions, following the court's decision. Anti-administration leaders held that he is ineligible for office under article four, section four of the state constitution.

This section provides as follows: "No person who has been, or hereafter shall be, convicted of bribery, perjury, or other infamous crime, nor any person who has been or may be a collector or holder of public moneys, who shall not have accounted for and paid over, according to law, all such moneys due from him, shall be eligible to the general assembly or to any office of profit or trust in this state."

Possibility of an appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court was not believed possible, although Gov. Small, who is at his home in Kankakee, had not been questioned regarding it. To get into the United States supreme court it would be necessary to raise the point that there had been a contravention of the United States constitution.

ITALIAN ATTACK ON GERMANY CAME "INOPPORTUNELY"

In the Italian newspapers and the Italian Chamber of Deputies the "in-sane propaganda" among the Germans in the south Tyrol has been bitterly attacked. The extreme Fascist journal L'Impero referred to Germany as "our instinctive racial enemy" and also gave Mussolini the idea he announced in his speech of Saturday that the Brenner pass on the new Austrian-Italian border, and which is the shortest route from central Germany into Italy, "is not the goal, but the starting point."

Going back to the Genesis of the South Tyrol problem, the foreign minister pointed out that the Italian government, before the advent of the Fascists, and also the King had promised the inhabitants freedom of language, religion and culture. He insisted that Germany had no political interest in the problem, but merely a cultural one.

Deploping what he termed irresponsible newspaper utterances, and the unauthorized attempt by a small group of municipal businessmen to inaugurate a boycott of Italy, he stated that the government was unalterably opposed to such childish measures and was concerned in maintaining the best relations with Germany's neighbors.

Charges "Smoke Screen."

He insisted that Mussolini, who had accepted German hospitality earlier in his career and now derided German tourists, was ungrateful.

Holding it unfair that Mussolini had replied to Premier Held of Bavaria without awaiting the official text of his speech regarding South Tyrol, he also insisted that the federal government alone was responsible for the German foreign policy.

Amid derisive laughter from the nationalist and communist deputies Dr. Stresemann said: "Threats are incompatible with the spirit of the League of Nations."

When the laughter was continued, he repeated the sentence emphatically.

"Incidents such as this show more clearly than ever the need for the League, where those who desire peaceful progress can unite," he declared, adding that, were Germany already a member of the League, she would take Mussolini's speech there for discussion.

Summing up Germany's attitude, the foreign minister said: "The speech was delivered with little show of emotion, and elicited only sporadic applause."

The occasion was a surprise and shower in honor of Mrs. Barley's son, Charles Huntley, and his bride of a month, nee Miss Marie McKay, formerly of Dixon. A delightful time was enjoyed in dancing and playing euchre. Radio and phonograph music also added to the pleasure of those present. During the evening Dorothy Huntley, sister of the bridegroom, Junior McFalls and Margaret Miner, nephew and niece of the bridegroom, entered the living room drawing a small decorated wagon, which was heaped with kitchen utensils for the newly married couple. Many other costly wedding gifts were also presented to Mr. and Mrs. Huntley, for which they expressed their appreciation. At a late hour Mrs. Barley served a delicious three-course lunch. The crowd departed at a wee small hour, extending their best wishes to the newlyweds for many years of happy married life. Several guests were present from Dixon.

meets Miller for a postponed game. Gerdes now leads the league in total points, but Reisinger has a good chance to overcome that lead by making a good score against Miller. Gerdes' final score gave his team a score of 15,268 for his total. Reisinger's present total is 13,093. This means that Reisinger must make a score of 2,175. This is not a high score and Reisinger has kept up to an average, better than that at every game.

This contest will be much livelier than previous games, due to the fact that there will be a big crowd of Brown Shoe Company employees on hand to boost Reisinger on to victory.

Weiss and Schildberg Broke Even Last Week

Last week's volley ball matches broke even for Weiss and Schildberg. The "Y" floor, between 5:15 and 6:30 is the scene of real competition, when these two teams get together. Tuesday evening Schildberg defeated Weiss by a total of 11 points. Wednesday night Gigous was the only player on his team present and the scores of the evening were not counted in the total. Bigous is Weiss' Class B Captain. Hunt represents Schildberg in Class B. Thursday brought out the Weiss forces to the full capacity and as a result, Weiss gave Schildberg and his team mates a severe beating, winning by 18 points. This victory left Weiss with a seven-point advantage. Friday night Hunt managed to defeat Gigous by seven pins, thus balancing the score of the week.

The scores for the first week of competition ended in a two-point lead for Schildberg. Last week was a draw. This week may be the beginning of a sad story for Schildberg.

ATHLOPIA SALUTING THE COLORS
Who are you, dusky woman, so ancient, hardy human.
With your woolly white and turban'd head, and bare, bony feet?
Why rising by the roadside, do you the colors greet?

'This while our army lines Carolina's sands and plains,
Forth from thy hovel door thou Ethiopia comest to me,
As under doughty Sherman I march toward the sea.)

Me master years a hundred since from my parents sunder'd,
A little child they caught me as the savage beast is caught,
Then hither me across the sea the cruel slaver brought.

No further does she say, but lingering all the day,
Her highborne turban'd head she wags, and rolls her darling eye
And courtesies to the regiments the guidons moving by.

What is it, fateful woman so bleak, hardly human
Why wag your head with turban bound, yellow, red and green?
Are the things so strange and marvelous you see or have seen?
—Walt Whitman.

Menus for the Family

Breakfast—Apples, cereal cooked with dates, thin cream, raised buckwheat pancakes, maple syrup, crisp graham toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Scalloped codfish, corn bread, carrot salad, canned peaches, cookies, milk, tea.

Dinner—Broiled halibut steak, baked macaroni and tomatoes, beet salad, raisin cream pudding, bran bread, milk, coffee.

No potatoes are suggested in this dinner menu, macaroni supplying the necessary starch and tomatoes the vitamins and mineral salts. Too often we think of a potato substitute as being a food merely rich in starch and forget to take care of the mineral salts and other properties when planning the dish to be used in place of the valuable tuber.

Scalloped Codfish
One pound salt codfish, 4 good-sized potatoes, 2 tablespoons olive or cooking oil, 2 tablespoons minced onion, 2 cups canned tomatoes, paprika.

Cover fish with cold water and let stand one hour. Drain and rinse well in fresh water. Cover with cold water and let stand over night. Drain and divide into four parts. Heat oil in casserole, add minced onion and cook five minutes without letting onion brown. Remove casserole from fire and add one-fourth of the fish. Cover with 1 potato pared and cut in very thin slices.

Add 1-4 the tomatoes. Continue layer for layer until all is used. The last layer will be of tomatoes. If the tomatoes are not very juicy add 1-4 cup of water. Sprinkle with paprika and cover casserole. Bake one and one-half hours in a moderate oven. (Copyright, 1926, N.E.A. Service, Inc.)

Banquet Friday Night a Success

Last Friday evening the twenty-fourth annual banquet of the L. S. A. Alumni of the East Jordan church was held in the church, more than a hundred being present to enjoy the delicious repast served. Elton Scholl was the toastmaster.

The program was as follows:
Divine Blessing—Rev. M. B. Leach.
Violin Solo—Zenith Livingston.

Response—Ruby Leach.
Monologue—Richard Langley.
Bass Solo—Earl Detweiler.
The New Year—Roy Detweiler.
Piano Duet—Nora Gates and Rubie Higley.

A fine orchestra from Rock Falls furnished some excellent music. The officers who had the successful and enjoyable banquet in charge were president, Ada Gatz; secretary, Lenore Langley; treasurer, Edith Scholl. The new officers for the year are: President, Nora Gatz; secretary, Mabel Scholl; treasurer, Ethel Conrad. The banquet rooms were beautifully decorated. The program was excellent. Everyone present had an exceedingly pleasant time.

SOLOMON DIED TOO YOUNG.

There are two courtrooms in the day's news. They offer a puzzle. Solve it and you have answered the question of the ages.

Into a courtroom in the west comes Susie, a comely young woman. She pleads for a divorce and alimony from her man, Joe. It seems Joe has been cruel or something.

The judge looks down. She is fashionably dressed and her figure is youthful. Her face is pretty, but the judge has seen a lot of pretty faces and he has begun to weary of them. The woman dabs her eyes with a scented handkerchief now and then.

The questions begin. The same old questions. It develops that Joe is earning $35 a week (and tips) by smoothing men's faces and shearing their manes. The judge is curious. Have they been able to live on that?

Oh, no, no, no! They have not been able to live on that. Why her hats cost that much. Very well, Susie, go on with the story.

So Susie, sobbing, goes on. The bitter truth comes out. Susie is earning $50 a week. Ah, ha! Why the alimony? Are there little mouths to feed? No, there are no children.

The judge is harsh with Susie. He has met her kind day after day and they are fraying his nerves a little. So he rasps out a message, through Susie, to all the gold diggers in the world. It is a terse message. Simply, "Stuff's off, darlings!"

The judge has set a precedent. Susie and her kind, who take up with Joe and his kind, must go their ways unblest and unrewarded, unless the experience be its own compensation.

Now, the second courtroom. This tribunal is a little more ponderous than the first. It is the supreme court of the sovereign state of Illinois. The question it has to decide is:

Shall women serve on juries in the sovereign state of Illinois? Shall they enter the box of justice where, since Illinois was born, only men have sat in judgment upon their fellows? Shall they enjoy the same punitive privileges and rights as their husbands, brothers and fathers?

The judges say no, they are afraid not. The statute isn't worded that way. Let the legislators change the law.

A group of women, quite different from Susie's tribe, has been waiting to hear what the judges would say. It is their fight for equality. They want a hand in administering justice. They are disappointed. But they will fight on.

Those are the two courtrooms in the day's news. There is your puzzle. The world's Susies are pleading for dependence. The others demand equality. Solomon, you died too young.

HOPEFUL.

A business man was telling an acquaintance why he had sent his daughter to a small "freshwater" college.

"I figured that the college itself didn't make such an awful lot of difference," he said. "After all, all any college can do is bring out what's already in the student."

Recall that remark the next time you hear our colleges assailed because of too much football, too many dances, too much drinking, etc.

THE BLUE KANGAROO

"Names, please!" said the Kangaroo, stopping suddenly and taking a book out of his coat pocket.

"Where is the Land of the Blue Cherry?" asked the Twins.

The Fairy Queen went to a map that hung on her wall. "I have so many kingdoms," she said, "that I have had to have a map made of them, so I shall know exactly how to reach each one."

She ran her finger up and down and finally she exclaimed, "Here it is! About six fairy miles from Yum Yum Land, seven fairy miles from Nobody's Land, eight miles from Hidy Go Land and nine miles from the Land of Dear Knows Where. Now you should know exactly how to reach it. At any rate your magic shoes will know the way."

Suddenly poor Twinkle Pen who had turned blue all over from drinking up his ink, began to sing, "Forty-nine blueberries a-hanging on the wall! Forty-nine blueberries a-hanging on the wall! Where can I find something to write on? I must put that down a thousand times so I won't forget it."

"Quick, children, go at once!" cried the Fairy Queen. Poor Twinkle Pen! He can't be cured until he eats a blue cherry. Fured it as soon as you can and bring it back.

So Nancy said: "Magic shoes, please be good little fairies, and help Nick and Nancy to find the blue cherries."

"Cherry!" corrected the Fairy Queen. "There is only one. It is called the Land of the Blue Cherry. No one knows exactly where it is. If he did know, I suppose the cherry would no longer be there. It is supposed to cure all ills."

"Like the Apple of Life that saved the beautiful princess in the fairy tale," said Nick.

"Exactly," said the Fairy Queen.

"Forty-nine blueberries—" began poor Twinkle Pen again.

"Oh, do hurry!" begged the Fairy Queen. "Do hurry—"

Suddenly the Fairy Queen and Twinkle Pen and the palace and everything faded away. And the

Her Own Way

A STORY OF

A GIRL OF TODAY

YOUTH'S DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

I had hardly got into bed when I heard mother from outside my door say in a very relieved tone:

"Why, Jason, Julia is home. Her door is closed."

Dad called back, "Perhaps the wind closed it. We did not hear her come in."

I did not want mother to see my wet clothes and mudcaked shoes, so I called as though I was just awakened from sleep.

"What's the matter? Is that you, mother? What do you want?"

"Nothing," answered mother happily. "I just came to see if you were home. Your father and I did not hear you." She pattered back to her own room and I settled in bed to have it out with myself.

Up until this time I had been just milling around, waiting for something to turn up, but now I had reached the place where I not only had to make a decision, but, having made it, I would have to stand by it.

Of course, after tonight everything was off between Chuck Becker and me. A man does not feel like paying any attention to a girl after she has given him such a smash in the face as I had.

And, as for announcing his engagement to me, I am certain Charlie never intended to marry me any more than I had intended to marry him. He was a good pal when he had not been drinking and I, having nothing better to do this summer, have let him play around with me until last night I found out he thought he owned me.

And that brought me to the resolution that had been forming in my mind since I left high school. No man will ever be able to say he owns Julia Dean, either legally or illegally. No one is going to own me but my own little self, whether I marry or become an old maid.

I know that this "owning business" was quite the thing in my mother's time. I remember hearing my mother say that the moment a girl fell in love with a man she wanted "to be long" to him.

That is all very well—for the man. But I certainly do not want to "be long" to anybody. I do not want to marry, either. Not for a long, long time, at least. I expect I will have to, some time, but I want to be happy as long as I can and I have never seen a man and woman that have been married over four years that were particularly happy.

THE VERY IDEA

by Hal Cochran

AT FIFTY

When man plods along till he's fifty years old, and can look the world square in the eye, there's a thrill thinking back on the years that have rolled on the days that have slowly slipped by.

Whatever the station in life that he's won, if he feels that he's earned it by action, the answer, of course, is that things have been done, and it gives him some real satisfaction.

If living has always been sessions of play, and his life of real labor is bare, the echoing back can't permit him to say that he ever has done his full share.

Real work, after all, when the true story's told, deserves all the praise that is sung. It helps you to feel you're fifty years old, but really just fifty years young.

If they'd put "Post No Bills" on mail boxes, it would save a lot of us a lot of worry around the first of the month.

Prof. Otergosh Sakes has deducted that if he removed all the half soles that have been put on old shoes, it would put a lot of people on their feet.

ABSENT-MINDED PEOPLE: The fellow who went motoring and left his auto in the garage.

But he had lots of crust, And hugged her more because he felt

That if he mussed, he must.

NOW, HONESTLY

He was an elderly man—gray-haired, and rather stooped.

Was the time when, no doubt, he was sure of his footing—but not today. And an icy sidewalk made him less sure. Down he went—while a crowd looked on and smiled, or laughed. Funny? Other people's misfortunes sometimes are. But never our own. There is a time and place for all laughter—and this occasion wasn't one of them.

Imagine a fellow ordering half-minute eggs. Pretty soft for some people.

No matter how hot up Illinois football fans get next season, they won't be able to "see Red."

HE—Do you mind if I smoke?
SHE—I should worry if ya burn up.

It takes two anybody to make a bargain—and two hundred women to make a bargain sale.

WHERE?

Say, when it comes to losin' things, my kid's a master mind. You ought to hear the song he sings of things he cannot find. From early in the morning, just like every other child his mother hears his warning, and it drives her nearly wild.

"Hey, mommy, where's my coat and hat? I threw 'em on the floor, just so I'd know where they were at. They're not there any more. I took my sockin' mittens off and hung 'em by the grate. Aw, shucks, come and help me find 'em, or the kids outside will wait."

Who took that icy snowball that wuz on the pantry shelf? I member where it wuz because I put it there myself. Aw, where'd ya hide that piece of rope? Aw, mommy, that was mine. It fit my sled exactly, so I cut it off yer line."

"It's 'where's my waist?' and 'where's my tie?' and 'where's my other shoes?' There's not a day that passes by that all this is not true. I guess all kids must have their turn, and sing that little song, until they're old enough to learn—put things where they belong."

A cottontail bunny crawled into a new oil pipe line out in Colorado, and the blamed thing missed working by a hare.

ABSENT-MINDED PEOPLE: The fella who threw his wife in off the front porch and kissed the morning paper goodbye.

The life insurance risk on a man of 90 ought to be a good bet. Few men die after that age.

"Would you care if I should leave you?"

Said the man, with tender touch. And then, quite absentmindedly, "His sweetie said, 'How much?'"

NOW HONESTLY—

"WELL! What are you crying about NOW?"

But you've snapped that at your youngster.

It is kinda irritating when a child comes into the house all tears— But, maybe that tot has fallen down; maybe some little thing has gone wrong; perhaps it doesn't amount to much—

And yet the right touch of sympathy will heal whatever is wrong.

It's a lot more fun soothing away tears, than it is trying to frighten them dry.

MARY BAKER EDDY THEME OF GREAT ADDRESS MONDAY

Dr. John M. Tutt Inspired
Hearers in Fine
Address

"Mary Baker Eddy, Progressive Christian," was the theme of an inspirational address for a large audience, gathered at the First Church of Christ Scientist last evening. The address was by Dr. John M. Tutt, C. B., of Kansas City, Mo., a member of the Board of Lectureship of the Mother Church, who said in part:

Early in the 19th century there was born, amid the granite hills of New Hampshire, a child whose delicate health was the despair of her parents, but whose spiritual mindedness early became a subject of wonderment to all. From childhood Mary Baker walked close to God. To her religion was more than an experience. It was life itself. Years of semi-invalidism forced Mrs. Eddy to struggle for relief in many systems of healing. Her inquiring mentality deeply studied material medicine and various mental medical systems, only to abandon them all as failing to meet her needs of mind and body. Throughout these years she went deeper and deeper into the things of God, always clinging to the conviction that within the Bible there lay the explanation of Jesus' healing power, a power he himself said should always be available. At last, when physically helpless and medically hopeless, her eyes straining heavenward were gladdened by the revelation of spiritual Truth unfolding its glories to her enraptured consciousness. No longer needed she echo the despairing cry of the ages, "The days are prolonged, and every vision faileth." The solving of the Christ idea brought complete healing of body and mind so that she could view the unfolding panorama of Spirit and joyfully declare with the prophet, "The days are at hand, and the effect of every vision." Fired by that vision and its results upon her body and mind, she reduced to human apprehension the revelation of Truth, and in 1875 published her book, "Science and Health, With Key to the Scriptures." This book and the Bible are the sole text books for all true cause and effect, of spiritual evolution, and its application and application to human life.

Mrs. Eddy was herself the deepest student of her book. She wrote under divine inspiration, as she herself said, "a scribe under orders" (Miscellaneous Writing, page 311); but thereafter always the text unfolded its treasures ceaselessly to her devoted search. It is related of Mrs. Eddy that she often expressed glad surprise as some new phase of Truth unfolded to her from the pages of her book. Casual readers of Science and Health sometimes remark upon the seeming repetition of statement in the text. To the student, such similarity of expression is not redundancy but rather is an illustration of Truth's infinite shades of meaning which in variety are even as the leaves of the tree, no two leaves being exactly alike.

The evolution of Truth in Mrs. Eddy's consciousness unfolded to her more and more clearly the revelation she received from Divine Mind; hence the revisions of Science and Health. It is certain that Mrs. Eddy knew most about God and Christian Science at her highest point of progress; therefore it is wise to obey her admonition to study only her latest and final revision of the text book as now published.

It must be insisted that Christian Science is the only system of true metaphysics. All other schools of mental science so-called, under whatever name, are falsely metaphysical, evolved from human personalities and hopelessly involved with matter. This word metaphysics means literally "beyond matter." Mrs. Eddy was not the first thinker to deny matter but she, excepting Christ Jesus, was the first to recognize the allness of divine Mind and its infinite idea, man and the universe, and to teach and prove that matter, inclusive of mortal man, is a false presentment of that Mind in Creation.

The coming of Christ in Christian Science revealed the allness of God and His spiritual creation; hence Christian Science is the final revelation of Truth. But of the unfolding of Truth to consciousness there can be no end. When questioned regarding the future of her church, Mrs. Eddy replied: "It will evolve scientifically." (Miscellany, page 342.) The spiritual growth of its members will measure the scientific evolution of the Church of Christ, Scientist; their spiritual status, their progress Christward will be its substance.

Mary Baker Eddy was single of mind and tongue. One searches her writings in vain for a double meaning—the sure evidence of a double mind. All the truly great have been remarkable for their simplicity. St. Paul speaks of "the simplicity of Christ." You are safe in taking what Mrs. Eddy says in the simple and full meaning of her words. Knowing the unfolding nature of Truth she said in her supreme patience and modesty: "I even hope that those who are kind enough to speak well of me may do so honestly and not too earnestly, and this seldom, until mankind learns more of my meaning and can speak justly of my living." (Miscellany, page 264.)

Today it is certain that too much of the facts about Mrs. Eddy cannot be told. Mrs. Eddy could no more be dissociated from Christian Science as Discoverer, Founder, and Inspired Leader, than Jesus could be left out of the scheme of salvation. Mary Baker Eddy never took a retrogressive step, hers was a capacity for sustained effort; all her paths were toward the kingdom. She never compromised on a sense of Principle; the Master's "suffer it to be so" she conceded to others, rarely to herself. She permitted no interruption of material and spiritual activity, yet her way was calm, orderly, and poised. The students' growth in spiritual understanding and working knowledge of Christian Science is accompanied by enlarging appreciation and love of her who brought divine Truth to human consciousness. To his thought unfolds Mrs. Eddy's adequacy for the destiny God had for her. He is inspired by her example of devotion to duty. He sees in Mrs. Eddy's life, duty, never tiring but hallowed by love, going all the way.

On Upward Wing
Infinite progression is the evolution of man's destiny. Destiny is what God has in store for man. That fate alone awaits each of us, a fate inexorable but benign. There is no evil destiny. "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." To do what God has for us to do, to receive what God has for us to receive—that is evolution. Such is man's free moral agency.

True progress is the attainment and maintenance of man's reflected dominion over all. Man's obedience to divine power and wisdom is his reflection of that power and wisdom. Man knows he has by reflection God's dominion over the spiritual works of His hands and also over the material counterfeits of those works. My friend, assume that dominion. Are you averse to giving up some cherished bad practice or perhaps some enslavement, through hesitancy to use will power? Remember, the will to do right is the human mind's nearest approach to the divine dominion. Government by divine Principle fosters the determination to do right. Be willing to do right. Be unwilling to do wrong. Remember Jesus who stood steadfast in the face of temptation. Remember Mrs. Eddy who would not be swerved from her course unless God turned her; God alone could change her mind. Steadfastness in the truth is an essential of true progress. Make up your mind to do right and you will enlist all the force of omnipotence on your side. In such determination human will has no place. Are you waiting for God to remove an obstacle or bad habit? Go out after it, act, work with God, and expect great things. To the extent that you immerse yourself in the divine Mind, you will emerge the victor over evil, for all moral fault is of the human mind and requires human will to commit it. The will to do right is a defiance of human will. Out of temptation overcome, not yielded to, comes spiritual strength. After the victorious argument Jesus had in the wilderness with personal sense he "returned in the power of the Spirit into Galilee, and there went out a fame of him through all the region round about." The fame of Jesus was based upon his spiritual power to heal the sick and the sinning and to comfort the sorrowing. My friend, would you, too, be strong in spiritual might? Would you be more useful to suffering humanity? Then wrestle with the arguments of error and prevail through reliance upon Christ, spiritual Truth.

A Christian is no stronger than at this point of contact with the world. Also he is no more useful than at that point. There is neither isolation nor segregation in Christian Science. In obedience to Christ's command Christian Scientists literally go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. Oh! blessed assurance that "shod with the preparation of the gospel" we may tread our way along the whole of the road with feet unswollen. Christ's healing and saving virtue will go out to whomsoever touches. Truth's garment on life's highway. Shall not Christians be always so clothed and available? We cannot let the rest of the world go by.

Christian Science is unfolding Truth to human consciousness. Obviously, the way to eliminate lies is to put the truth in their stead. The only way to be less material and more spiritual—the object of all Christian activity—is to make a start away from matter, and then keep on going away from matter. This is man's progressivism that each day shall unfold his best endeavor. So my friend, let each day be to you a better day—a day in which to live better, to love more, to fear less. Your spiritual growth will multiply your experiences. Some of them may be bitter, others will be sweet. Take them as they come and rejoice in every impulsion heavenward. Let even the bitter help you on your way. Your spiritual horizon, bear in mind, is peculiarly your own and is dependent on your point of ascension. Only so far a horizon have you as your spiritual elevation affords. But God's power, purpose and action are also yours by divine reflection, yours by divine sonship, yours with which to envision and evolve the limitless wonders of true being.

And the pathless sky;
Bird, O my bird, listen to me,
Do not fold your wings."

PITTSBURGH SUN EXTRA:

Mr. Karl Whitney immediately took over the management of the plant as Mr. Condon, the assistant manager, is now in the hospital burned and delirious from what has happened, all the time bemoaning the fact that he could not have saved his employer and friends and Miss Perier, even if he gave his own life to do it.

Everything possible is being done for the sufferers and already Mr. Whitney has brought some kind of order out of the terrifying chaos. It will be an interesting fact to the superstitious when it is known that Miss Perier had on the fatal pearls which she had just purchased from Mrs. Prescott, and of course they were destroyed with her.

At this time, only about an hour since the accident occurred, no one knows what disposal will be made of the picture. Of course it will never be shown from the screen.

The loss of Miss Perier is almost irreparable to the moving picture industry. She was quite the most popular star in the whole profession.

Mr. Prescott came here at the request of Mr. Graves Hamilton, the founder of the mill, just before he died, and has been making a very

Here is a surgeon's wonderful prescription now dispensed by pharmacists at trifling cost, that will do more towards helping you get rid of unsightly spots and skin disease than anything you've ever used. Not only does this great healing antiseptic oil promote rapid and healthy healing in open sores and wounds, but boils, abscesses and ulcers are almost immediately relieved and cleanly healed.

In skin diseases its action is little less than magical. The itching of eczema is instantly stopped; the eruptions dry up and scale off in a very few days. The same is true of hives, itchy, salt rheum and other irritating and unsightly skin troubles. You can obtain Moore's Emerald Oil in the original bottle at any modern drug store. It is safe to use, and failure in any of the ailments noted above is next to impossible. All druggists can supply you at any time.—Adv.

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes—Most Women Can Have

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisons matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—now and then just to keep them fit. 15c and 30c.

THREE YEARS LATER

Letter from Leslie Prescott to Little Marquise, care the Secret Drawer

I am sitting here writing to you the first letter since that awful accident and the last letter I shall ever write you, dear little Marquise.

You have been a good friend and confidant to Leslie Prescott in the years gone by—years so full of sorrow and grief that I am going to try to forget them. If it were not for my two splendid boys I would want to begin my life from tonight.

I would want to start out with all the memories of those tragedies that led up to the awful holocaust which climaxed the end of my married life with John Allen Prescott, completely blotted from my scoured heart.

Poor John! I have often wondered if he realized that there were two natures continually fighting against each other within his body!

His great mistake was in marrying me. The only woman for him was the woman who became with him a mass of steel from which no one could ever find any physical trace of the component parts of a human body.

How To Quickly Stop Bad Coughs

It is often surprising how quickly the heaviest cough disappears when treated by a remarkable new method.

Here is the method, based on the famous Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You simply take one teaspoonful and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals irritation, but also loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of the coughing. So the severest cough soon disappears completely.

Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, bronchitis, spasmodic cough, etc. Fine for children, too—no harmful drugs. Very economical, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

MAJOR LEAGUE'S SEASON IS JUST "AROUND CORNER"

Subs Pry Lid Off on Earliest Jaunt to Training Camp

Chicago, Feb. 9.—(AP)—The 1926 major league baseball season is just around the corner. More specifically, it is less than 48 hours away.

Bright and early Thursday morning the majors will be pushed out into the sunlight by a trainful of Chicago Cubs, California lions.

Some twenty odd players will leave here Thursday morning, several more will be picked up at Kansas City and a third contingent, headed by Manager Joe McCarthy, will be waiting at Los Angeles. At least thirty players will be on hand Monday morning when the tin foil comes off the first ball and McCarthy starts his career as a big league pilot.

The arrival of spring and baseball was heralded here today by the pungent odor of moth balls. President William Veeck and attaches at Cub headquarters burrowed in a winter's accumulation of dust to piece together equipment for the early arrivals, a dozen or so of whom have been on hand for several days.

By the time they reach the west coast, regular sorties into the dining car and other amusement facilities will enable the players, who have come from hither and yon, to get acquainted. It will be a crowd of strangers, only one or two of the men who made up the team at the start of the 1925 season being on the trip roster.

That's one of the reasons of the early training date. By March 1 when the other clubs are just getting limbered up, McCarthy will have watched his whole crew in action and will have a fair idea of what he has, or hasn't.

LEAGUE TO GIVE ADDRESS OF EX-KAISER TO LADY

Rock Island German Woman Wants to Write Him

Geneva, Switzerland, Feb. 9.—(AP)—There is an aged German woman in Rock Island, Ill., who makes good coffee for her boarders and is estimable in many other ways, who wants to know the exact address of the former German Emperor. She has appealed through a friend to the League of Nations for the information.

This friend in the writing room of the Y. M. C. A. at Rock Island composed a letter to Sir Eric Drummond, the secretary-general of the League. He revealed that he takes his meals with the German woman and wants to help her.

"I would derive from what she says," the letter read, "that she had known the kaiser in infancy and that through the war she sort of lost trace of some of her friends. Her son works and they take in some roomers and boarders. Everything on the table is of good quality and the old lady sees that every one has all the good coffee they desire, talking partly in English and partly in German."

The League will reply giving the desired address.

"Why not," a League official said, "We have not got so big and proud but we can be of some courteous service to the aged German lady of Rock Island."

American League Club Owner Meet in Capital

Washington, Feb. 9.—(AP)—Club presidents of the American League assembled here today to adopt the playing schedule for the coming season but with other and more important topics on tap.

The playing dates already have been assigned and the magnates merely have to approve them, leaving the remainder of the season for discussion of a proposed revised constitution for the league and other matters.

Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Senators, is urging revision of the constitution, but is opposed to the proposal of the joint rules committee that pitchers be permitted to use resin bags for drying their hands. Reorganization of the constitution and its many amendments he believes, would be the "best thing the American League has done in years," while adoption of the resin proposal would be "a step backward."

Whether the question of extending Baseball Commissioner Landis' contract will be acted upon this session remained problematical.

Grange and Pyle Work to Form New League

Chicago, Feb. 9.—(AP)—C. C. Pyle, with "Red" Grange, returned to Chicago last night to plunge into the work of organizing a new professional football league in opposition to the National Football League which denied Grange a franchise to operate a club in the Yankee Stadium at New York. Pyle said the league would be limited to twelve clubs and intimated that he already had eight cities as prospects. Chicago may be included in the circuit, he said.

The True story of a girl who wanted thrills!

MARION had every advantage fond parents could give her—yet she was desperately unhappy. A feverish desire to escape the commonplace routine of home possessed her. She longed to spread her untied wings and fly away. She dreamed of a life of new, strange pleasures; of romantic adventure; of an existence crowded with excitement and thrills. And the dream came true—but it also brought a bitter awakening.

Chance took her to Paris where, without experience, knowing nothing of the world and its countless pitfalls and temptations—she suddenly found herself an almost helpless prey of forces grimly determined to bring about her downfall.

What Marion went through in the gay French Capital is a powerful, heart-gripping drama—all the more convincing because it is true.

Young people who believe they are being cheated of life's pleasures—who long for adventure, romance and excitement—will read here a warning they cannot help but heed.

Marion's story, entitled "I Wanted Thrills," appears complete in True Story Magazine for March. And this is only one of the many absorbing true life narratives that appear in this issue of America's most widely-read magazine.

Other Gripping Stories in the March True Story Are:

"Dark Ways"—The power of evil is vividly illustrated in this pitiful story of a girl compelled by a wicked and powerful man. A story every girl should read.

in the world. Intoxicated by her beauty, he had never questioned who or what she had been before he met her. But when suspicion entered—read what happened. "Should a woman tell her husband everything?"

"The Evil Doer"—In every city and village are highly respected men who have opportunities to do evil that, if exercised, would mean the eternal ruin of "sentimental" wives and innocent daughters everywhere. This tragic story will give you something to think about.

'SATAN IN SABLES'

By Bradley King

SYNOPSIS
Prince Michael Yeredoff, wealthy Russian philanthropist in Paris, becomes interested in Colette, an unworldly poor girl. His innocent brother, Paul, is snared by Dolores, one of Michael's cast-offs, who uses him as a tool for revenge. Circumstances indicate that Colette stole the priceless Yeredoff emerald.

CHAPTER III—Continued

And Michael? What would he think when he found out that the little Columbine, the "premiere danseuse of the Rue Chaligny," as she had crowned herself, was nothing better than a pickpocket? Visions of Michael's reproachfully accusing face, of Billy's undernourished, rose like red stoplights before her lawless eyes.

"The good God knows that if I took it, it would not be for my gain," she said aloud to herself. "It would be for Billy. But—tonight—I shall take it back to M'sieu Michael."

"The more fool you are, then!" said a gruff voice behind her. Whirling around, Colette found Emile standing there with his speedy eyes fixed on the emerald. "Sacre, what a jewel!" he added. "Let me look at it."

Slouchy and unshaven, Emile was a typical predatory loafer of the Parisian underworld. A cap pulled down tightly over his eyes, a red handkerchief caught loosely around his neck, accentuated the hawk-like keenness and the shifty look in his small, ferret eyes. Emile was of the type that cannot see any advantage whatsoever in a man doing an honest day's toil and receiving an honest man's wages in return, when by manipulation of a light pair of fingers, for instance, one can realize more in an evening than by a month of manual labor. To him Billy was an inconvenience; he was fully content to let Colette devote her life to the care of the child! If he was lucky he would give her money—sometimes. If not, well, she was earning enough to look after Billy and herself—and him, too.

"It's just a little stone that a friend of mine lost," Colette answered, nervousness making a dismal failure of her attempt to be nonchalant, "and I am taking it back to him tonight."

"Taking it back? Oh! Well, if you insist on being so thoughtful, I will be the messenger! But come now, let me see it!"

"No, no, Emile, there is no need to look at it." She turned to slip the emerald into her stocking for safekeeping, but Emile caught hold of her with a grip of steel.

"You little fool!" he cried. "When we haven't any too much food in the house, and I've been needing money for weeks! Give it here!"

Colette struggled with desperate courage. But, of course, to no avail. A heavy hand stifled her attempts to scream, brute force tore her fingers apart, snatched the emerald from her. The fury of the wildcat was futile in the shaggy grasp of the gorilla. Finally, with a shove and an oath, Emile threw Colette to the floor, where she lay breathless, exhausted, and sadly bruised.

"Good God!" Emile muttered, gazing at the stone in his hand. "It is the largest emerald I have ever seen! Such cutting! And you," he glowered at Colette, "were going to be a nice girl and return it, eh. Well, I'll take good care of it now—and who knows, I may give you a new dress for a present tomorrow!" he concluded sarcastically.

Dragging the girl to her feet, he twisted her around until his mole face and smouldering eyes were close to hers.

"Remember," he snarled, "one word of this to anybody, or any were talk about returning the stone to your friend, and by our Lady!—you'll never see Billy again!"

Throwing Colette aside, Emile lurched into his room and slammed the door.

Colette felt crushed—beaten. She knew that Emile's threat was no idle one, for once before he had started to take Billy out of Paris, to put him in the care of some woman in the country. Colette's pleading won that time. But—would it the next time? Emile realized that the boy meant everything to Colette; that the surest way to strike at her was through him. Consequently, he never failed to make the most of his ace.

But in Michael's eyes she would be a thief! Undoubtedly he would think that she had stolen the emerald, and instead of having a kindly memory of the little Columbine, he would always recall her as a criminal—as one who had come into his house to dance, laugh, and—rob him. Indeed, he would even suspect that her fainting spell—his genuine sign of her undernourishment—was part of a well-schemed ruse, conceived beforehand and cleverly carried out.

It was intolerable! Rebellious at the injustice of it, she determined to face the issue; yes, if it even meant losing the most precious thing in her life—little Billy. Better that than to be branded a common thief in the eyes of the world. Why, what if Michael had reported his loss to the police and a search was being made for her this very minute?

Creeeping to the door leading to Emile's room, she knelt down and peered through the keyhole. Her scoundrelly brother-in-law was standing by the window examining the emerald with evident satisfaction. After a moment, he wrapped it in an old handkerchief, then tucked it away in a drawer of his bureau. Carefully locking the drawer and putting the key in his pocket, he lay down upon the bed and composed himself like a well-contented alley dog.

After watching him for a few moments, Colette crept away from the door and sat down to think. How to get the stone away from him was the problem! He would undoubtedly go to sleep now. Late in the evening he would sneak out, and through some underground channels known only to those of his class, would seek a fence—buyer of questionable goods. There in some out of the way dive in the underworld, Emile would receive money, probably not a tenth of what the jewel was worth. Then, indeed, Colette would stand branded as a thief before the world.

Billy interrupted her thoughts. "I slept some more, Auntie—I slept some more! And now you said that I could have my bon bons," he cried, "and then you promised to take me in the park to watch the funny birds with the long necks, that stand on their heads in the water!"

"Very well, Billy; here are the candies I promised you—though perhaps you'd rather not eat them, but save them for your friends, the Bole de Boulogne swans!"

"But can't we take them some bread instead?" Billy asked so anxiously that Colette laughed and reassured him.

"True! Eat the bon bons yourself, and I will get a bag for the bread."

Looking through the keyhole once more, Colette saw that Emile was fast asleep. She inwardly prayed that he would remain serene and that some means might be given her to get into his room and secure the emerald before he removed it.

Then she took Billy and departed.

"What a glorious afternoon," Colette exclaimed as they were walking along. "See the grass is freshly green and the buds are starting. Soon everything will be mellow and blooming and then what fun we'll have with picnics, and visits to the country, and who knows what else?"

"The real country, where the cows live!" Billy asked, his little face all aglow at such a prospect.

"The really, truly country where the cows live!" Colette laughingly assured him. "One day, Billy boy, if my dream comes true and my air-castles are not tumbled to the ground, we will live there all the time. Then we will be awakened in the morning by the birds, and lulled to sleep at night by the wind in the trees."

"Billy's pond," as he proudly termed it, was duly reached and great was his enjoyment as the swans were fed. This turned out to be a red letter afternoon in his life because for the first time his favorite swan, a particularly large one, had actually come right up and taken a piece of bread out of his tiny fingers. It was an ordeal that required herculean courage, but Billy rose to the occasion like a man even though for a moment he was in doubt as to whether to take to his heels, or depend upon the protection of his Auntie's presence at his elbow.

HEALTHGRAMS

Contagious diseases come off in crops like garden vegetables and grain. Just as onions, rhubarb, asparagus, lettuce, radishes, beans, etc. follow each other as the season advances so the various communicable diseases occur in regular chronological sequence. The main crop of scarlet fever comes off in the first week of the year. Chickenpox is a close second reaching its height in the third week. Then comes smallpox with its biggest yield in the fifth week, pneumonia in the ninth week, measles in the eighteenth week, whooping cough in the twenty-ninth, typhoid fever in the thirty-seventh and diphtheria in the forty-fifth week of the year. Other diseases are sandwiched between these.

Of course the season is sometimes early or late, as we say, but that rarely interferes with the regular sequence although each disease may arrive a trifle before or after schedule. Just like bothsome plants and those that grow on the sunny side of a slope, any of the contagious diseases will develop at any time of year under favorable conditions. In general, however, the time to expect or look for a particular contagious infection is during its own season.

There is no more mystery about the succession of contagious diseases than there is about the succession of garden vegetable crops. The organisms of germs that cause diseases are tiny vegetables and naturally enough, they follow the seasonal habits of vegetation. This knowledge is, of course, distinctly advantageous to those who would avoid infection.

Tight now smallpox season is at its height in Illinois. Unvaccinated people may get the disease with little or no trouble. Several outbreaks have developed through the state. In Champaign county about 40 cases have been reported recently and Kane county has an equally bad record. Numerous smaller epidemics have developed at other points.

Within four weeks pneumonia will reach its maximum prevalence if it runs true to form this year. Over 400 cases are being reported weekly now and unless people use every reasonable precaution against this disease, the weekly figure may rise by 25 or 30 percent before it begins to fall.

Although the main season for measles is still three months away, the early plantings are coming off now. Approximately 100 cases are being reported daily with the probability that this number will be doubled in mid-season, which usually comes in May. It may be interesting to the parents of young children to know that 54 percent of the 2426 fatalities caused during measles in Illinois during the last seven years occurred among children less than 2 years of age.

A quarantine sign says to people on the outside, "If you have any sense you'll stay out of here. There is a fellow inside with a bag full of dangerous seed and he is doing his best to get rid of them." It says to the people on the inside "If you have any consideration for others you will keep them out and you will keep the sick one strictly isolated."

Notifying health officers of every case of contagious disease is not only a legal duty in Illinois, but it is a moral obligation to other people. Indeed the reporting of diseases and advising the public of the location of cases is considered of so great importance that the League of Nations has established a health department, the chief function of which is the collection compilation and distribution of reports showing world-wide prevalence of communicable diseases. Some worthy commentators have said that if the league should never accomplish any other thing, its health service will have made it worth while.

BARBARA HAWLEY, 25, jilted BRUCE REYNOLDS, architect, because she wants to see life. She gets a job on the Chicago Telegraph. Bruce joins the firm of Manners, Stone and Reynolds, promoting Vale Acres. He meets LYDIA STACY, elch widow, who becomes infatuated with him.

Barbara, covering a suicide, finds a red scarf she recognizes as Mrs. Stacy's. Mrs. Stacy likes Bruce but she refuses her advances so she tells ANDREW McDERMOTT, editor of the Telegraph, that Vale Acres is crooked. A member absconds and Bruce is indicted. Bruce is cleared after Mrs. Stacy has been forced to testify by Barbara, who confronts her with the scarf.

Bruce despairs of winning Barbara and weds VIOLETTA CRANBY, factory girl. Barbara advised in the Telegraph "lover-love" column. McDermott's daughter, Fanny, who has shared Barbara's apartment, elopes with Jerome Ball against Barbara's advice. Violetta and Bruce have a child. Barbara leaves Chicago to join the staff of Footlights magazine in New York.

ELIZABETH FURNIVALL, single at 40, becomes Barbara's friend at the Footlights office. She is hurt when Barbara moves to Greenwich Village on the advice of MARIA CAPRI, free verse writer. Maria steals the diamond rings Barbara's mother left her.

Barbara is invited to a studio party by DAISY OLIVERO, actress. That day Barbara finds Miss Furnivall dead from gas. Barbara, in desperation, goes to Daisy's party, hoping to forget. Ramon Donzelli, futurist painter, takes a fancy to Barbara, to Daisy's disgust. But Barbara sees him dipping his fingers into the salad bowl.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER LIII
TALK languished while food occupied the attention of the party. Barbara found an ottoman in a corner and sank down upon it. She could not cut. Words drifted toward her from time to time—"self-determination," "Swami," "aura," "sublimation," "strinkberg." The bearded man and Thomas Higgins seemed to be keeping up the conversation chiefly. One of the girls in black had gone frankly to sleep on the floor, and the other was drinking too many cocktails and laughing shrilly between drinks.

Daisy Olivero was not playing the role of orthodox hostess. She stood moodily by the window for long periods of time, only turning when someone addressed a remark to her. A cuckoo clock piped up twelve strokes. "What a silly thing for you to have, Daisy," cried Thomas Higgins. "I thought cuckoo clocks lived only in Victorian parlors, along with haircloth sofas and wax flowers."

Daisy turned on him. "Cuckoo clocks can tell people when to go home as well as any other kind of clock," she flared.

Thomas Higgins looked at her soberly. "Well," he drawled, "that hour has evidently struck for me, at least. And I don't think the rest of the gang is particularly well equipped, either."

The girl in black raised her voice. "Who says I'm not welcome? I'm sure Daisy wants me here, don't you, Daisy, darling?"

Miss Olivero did not deign to answer. Higgins struggled to his feet and stepped over the body of the sleeping girl on the floor. "I'll be going," he said.

drawled. "Somebody order my coach and six."

The rest of the crowd followed him. Barbara evaded the efforts of Ramon to follow her. "I've had a pleasant time, Miss Olivero," she said, in the hallway. "You must come and see me sometime."

"Thank you, I never make calls," replied her hostess. "Good night."

"Oh, Miss Hawley, Guinevere," Ramon was shouting after Barbara, as she ran down the steps. She ran still faster. When she reached the outside door, she heard the voices of Ramon and Miss Olivero in sharp altercation above.

She ran out into the street and down to the taxi stand at the corner. As her cab passed Miss Olivero's building, she saw Ramon eagerly up and down the street.

When Barbara reached home, she bathed and washed her hair, so that it no longer smelled of incense and stale tobacco.

The winter months crept away, with their long nights and murky dawns. Barbara went to work morning after morning before the fog had risen over Manhattan.

Miller had apparently accepted her as his main helper. Two increases in her pay check, and important assignments that came frequently put her at ease as to her place on the staff.

Miller came into her office one winter day in conversational mood. "Funny thing," he said, lounging on her desk, "they never found a scratch in Betsy Furnivall's belongings to indicate why she killed herself."

"All her letters had been destroyed before she died. And her personal effects were put in order. She must have been planning the suicide for days."

Barbara sighed.

March came in with blusterings and clouds of dust. The city shivered and braced its shoulders and prayed for spring to come. And the street sweepers struggled to clear the pavements of the slime left by the winter's snows.

One Saturday in March, Barbara came into the office with a dull headache. The air outside was soft between gusts, and the green grocers were beginning to put new radishes and tender lettuce in their windows.

Barbara sat at her desk, head in hands, thinking of nothing. The office boy brought in the mail and jumped at her, laughing to see her start. But she looked at him, with her usual ready smile, and he left the room hastily.

Barbara opened her mail. It contained nothing but bills and publicity sheets. She threw it in a basket and rose, reaching for her hat and coat. It was nearly noon.

In the street outside, she walked slowly. There was a little tea room around the corner that she sometimes visited. Here she found a table in a dark corner and ordered salad and sandwiches. The tea room had not yet begun to fill up, and Barbara had the corner to herself.

The waitress brought a dainty tray and set the dishes before Barbara.

Barbara looked up.

"Why, Barbara dear!" It was Fanny McDermott. "Why, how ill you look, Babbs!"

Barbara stammered slightly, furious with herself for feeling embarrassed. "I'm not ill, Fanny. It's good to see you."

"Good! I'm tickled silly. How long have you been in New York. Dad didn't tell me."

"Perhaps he thought it wouldn't matter to you," Barbara stopped short, biting her lips. Fanny put her hand on Barbara's shoulder.

"He knew better than that, Babbs," she said, softly. Then, with increased gaiety, "Come on out home with me now and stay for dinner. I'm dying for you to see my cute place."

Barbara glanced at Fanny's left hand. Fanny was not wearing a wedding ring. She had not spoken of Jerome.

"Why, yes, Fanny, I'd like to. I was wondering what to do with a dull Saturday afternoon. Where do you live?"

Fanny dimpled. "On Myerwald drive. Isn't that gorgeous? It's just a little bird cage of a kitchenette, but so cute, all ivory and blue. And everything electric and easy to work with. You'll never believe I'm a good housekeeper, will you?"

Barbara laughed. "I'll believe it when I see you at work," she said. They caught a Riverside bus on Fifth avenue and took seats on top. Fanny chattered incessantly, asking questions about Barbara's work and about friends they had in common. Barbara answered quietly. No mention of their last meeting was made.

Central Park was flaunting a few banners of young greenery. A warm spicy spring smell from the earth greeted them as the bus lumbered past the park.

At 110th street Fanny rang the bell. "This is our corner," she said to Barbara.

The apartment was all that Fanny had said. Barbara glanced around his sunny living room. It was furnished with old walnut and costly Chinese rugs.

Fanny buzzed about in the tiny kitchen, calling to Barbara to come out and sit by her. She had slipped into a huge apron and was scrubbing potatoes with a vegetable brush.

The preparations for dinner went on, while Fanny and Barbara talked. They could see the Hudson river from the kitchen window. The fleet was in the river.

"There's a big gray battleship that is my special pet," said Fanny. "I like to lie on the sofa in the other room and look at it and pretend I'm the captain. And when it goes away I don't feel right at all till it comes back." She giggled childishly.

The doorkell rang. "Dear me," cried Fanny, "that's Jerome. You let him in, will you, Barbara? My hands are all wet."

(To Be Continued)

Someone close beside Barbara called her by name, breathlessly. Barbara looked up. "Why Barbara, dear!" It was Fanny McDermott.

RE-DISCOVERING ILLINOIS

By LESTER B. CROSBY

Illinois Chamber of Commerce

Five hundred years ago the kings of Europe and the royal shebas who made up their robes were clothed in fine gold and silver. The finer the metals the rarer and the more valuable the garments and so the more they were valued.

In a little village in southern France a small group of peasant artists learned the secret of drawing these threads finer than anyone else anywhere. This was because they found out how to drill amazingly small holes through sapphires and rubies. These were used as the dies. And finally, as demands for finer threads came, they drilled diamonds making holes smaller than in the sapphires. For all these centuries this little group of artists in a little village in southern France have kept their secret.

I picked up the trail of these medieval French artisans the other day in an Illinois town. I found here, in a plant in North Chicago, diamonds brought from France which are used in one of the most remarkable laboratories in all the world—a laboratory which is doing special research work in three rare metals. They are tungsten, molybdenum and tantalum.

Tantalum was named for Tantalus, the character in Greek mythology whose name gives us the word tantalize. Tantalum is the most tantalizing metal ever found, from the viewpoint of the metallurgical chemist. Tantalus, you should know, was one who because he cast a covetous eye on a goddess, or something like that, was doomed by one of the angry gods to a strange punishment.

He was to sit always in a stream of cooling water, always thirsty, and whenever he bent over to take a drink the waters would recede. Bunches of grapes hung about him and whenever he reached out for them they would swing away, just beyond his reach.

In this Illinois laboratory the Farnsteel Products Co., Inc. spent six years time and $250,000 learning how to handle this elusive metal and figuring out what it is. Then these scientists spent two more years working to create a market. Today they are doing a business of $4,000,000 a year in this strange metal and its products.

They found success in seeming defeat. The idea came to use it as a valve. That was an amazing thing. Why it acts as it does no one knows. But out of that fact came the tantalum rectifier. What does it do? I will mention two things:

1—Makes possible elimination of interference in radio.
2—Solves the problem of obtaining direct current from alternating current.

Sixty-five railroads have adopted the tantalum rectifier because it gives greater perfection and so makes life safer.

Let us return for a moment to the rubies, sapphires and diamonds. In this manufacturing laboratory I was shown wire drawn from tungsten and tantalum to a fineness of 4-10,000ths of an inch. That means that this wire is so fine that it would take 2,500 strands of it, laid side by side, to measure an inch. Compare that with the hairs of your head or the threads of a spider's web.

It is so fine that when it was laid across my fingertips I could not feel it and could see it only when it got a glint of the sun. Yet when I pulled it, it had definite strength.

What is this fine wire used for?

It is this very fine wire that has made the radio possible and so, you see, when the kings and queens of the old world, five hundred years ago, started a craze for cloth woven of fine gold and silver threads, they laid the foundation for radio and a most amazing industry in North Chicago, Illinois.

There are other wonders in this peculiar laboratory, more than I can tell here. I met there Dr. Clarence W. Balke, for whom baltite is named. I saw photographs of sections of metals enlarged 5,000 times. I saw a corium, a sparkling metal. Draw a knife across it and a stream of fire pours out.

I found this work filled with romantic and dramatic interest," commented Dr. Ronald Webster, one of the super-scientists there. "I like it because we are working all the time on the absolute edge of human knowledge. It is fascinating and stimulating."

I learned that tungsten, molybdenum and tantalum melt only at from 5,000 to 6,000 degrees Fahrenheit. That means that no crucible has ever been made which will hold them in the melted form; the crucible will melt first. They are worked in vacuum.

We turn now to pills. In this same city, North Chicago, are the Abbott Laboratories. They are on a twenty-four acre site and the buildings cover twelve acres. The plant, just being completed, represents an investment of more than $1,000,000.

"The great business of today started yesterday in a most humble way," says Roger W. Balson, eminent authority on industrial development. "And the great businesses of tomorrow are today being operated in cellars and garrets."

How did the Abbott Laboratories start? Well, back in the 90's a family physician, Dr. W. C. Abbott, lived in Ravenswood, Chicago. There were a few certain medicines he used which were not packaged as he thought they should be for convenient handling. So he had them packaged according to his ideas for his own use. One day he said to himself, "Other physicians ought to want these."

So he made an advertising appropriation of twenty-five cents. It was for a "four-liner" in a medical journal. It worked—pulled business. The advertising appropriation of the Abbott Laboratories now is $200,000 a year. There are a lot of facts between that first advertisement and now.

The company is the largest in the United States manufacturing "road tar synthetics." Its business is solely with the pharmaceutical manufacturer, the wholesale druggist, the retail druggist and the physician. It markets no so-called patent medicines at all.

Another example of the little business growing. The Chicago Hardware Foundry Co. of North Chicago, was incorporated in 1897, capital $5000. Employees took all the stock. John Sherwin foreman of the plant through prior years of vicissitudes, became president. E. P. Sedgwick, superintendent, became secretary and treasurer.

Today that company is incorporated for $1,300,000 and has 880 people on its payroll.

It is building a $100,000 addition to its plant which now covers the most of twenty-four acres. It is manufacturing...

turing porcelain ware of many kinds, bases for barber chairs, white tops for porcelain tables, cafeteria equipment, hospital equipment, parts for merchandising scales, dish washing machines.

It has a gray iron foundry, makes ornamental electric lamps, ornate aquariums, parts for "Hot Point" irons. They do come up from small startings.

One day back in 1919 W. J. Grotenhuis stood in a show window on Michigan avenue, Chicago, watching a stream of cars go by. The driver of a light delivery truck swung around a corner and struck a passenger car head on. Right there another business was born.

Riding home with W. G. Pancoast, a business associate late that afternoon, Mr. Grotenhuis told of the accident and pointed out that one bumper had gone over the top of the other bumper resulting in serious damage to both cars. "They're not made right," he said. These two men went to work to improve the bumper of 1919 and developed the Biflex bumper.

They sold 31,000 of them in 1920; 91,000 in 1921; 131,000 in 1922; 169,000 in 1923; 175,000 in 1924; 190,000 in 1925 and they plan to make 250,000 in 1926. Their plant investment at North Chicago is $350,000, on their payroll about 280 people. The plant covers 6½ acres and their advertising appropriation this year will be $200,000.

Thus was another industry born of such a little thing as a delivery boy forgetting his boulevard stop.

Among the other large plants at North Chicago are the American Steel Wire Co., 4000 employees; Cyclone Fence Co., 1200; National Envelope Co., 600; Yale & Towne Mfg. Co., Sager Lock Works, 300; Creamery Package Co., 200. There are fifty or twenty smaller plants making everything from wood patterns to incubators and from candy to vacuum cleaners.

The federal census gave North Chicago a population of 5839 in 1920. Its population, based on the school census, is put at 9000 today. It is the only town in Illinois that I have heard of that has more people on its payroll than live in it.

North Chicago lies directly south of Waukegan, only an invisible line between them. Directly adjoining east and south is the Great Lakes Naval training station and directly south of that is Lake Bluff. Hundreds of workmen in North Chicago live in other places up and down the Lake Shore. North Chicago is one of Illinois' amazing and romantic work shops. It is a place where things are achieved.

Dr. Cummings' Health Column

BY DR. HUGH S. CUMMING
Surgeon General, U. S. Public Health Service

The school of hygiene and public health is an indication, among other things, of the shifting of emphasis in medicine from cure to prevention. It is a change that has been going on gradually for the past decade, and this development in the educational system only serves to direct the attention of the public to the movement.

Schools of public health and departments of hygiene growing up in many of our medical schools, and in universities which do not provide opportunities for medical training, are realizing the great advance in preventive medicine, and the need for special training for those charged with the control of preventable diseases.

These schools are concerned not so much with the cure of the individual sick, training for which is provided by medical schools already in existence, as they are concerned with the combating of disease as a whole and the safeguarding of the health of the community and the nation.

Probably never before in the history of the world has the demand for public health workers been as great as at the present time. There is a demand not only for health officers or general administrators in counties, towns, cities and states, but also for workers and teachers in technical branches.

Men and women trained to compile vital statistics, trained to interpret such statistics, are in demand, because they are essential in carrying out of intelligent health programs. Bacteriologists, chemists, and engineers are needed to protect the water supply.

Specialists in hygiene are coming to have an increasingly important place in the promotion of health and the protection of life of the industrial workers. Educators, who by their lectures, exhibits, demonstrations and writings can accurately and effectively carry on the work of popular health education, are also in demand.

Death among babies and disease among children show a further diminution with the establishment of dispensaries, health stations and visiting nurse services. Figuratively speaking, the line held by all diseases together has been pushed back over 25 per cent of the territory held a generation ago.

Schools of public health deserve to increase and multiply, because they are needed. They deserve your support, they merit your interest. They are citadels training men and women to go out and do battle for you and your children against disease in the years to come. The line held by disease today must be pushed back still farther.
